Synopsis

The committee to choose the Queen of the May meets in Lady Billows' house. After some discussion, they reach the painful conclusion that no young ladies in town are worthy of the honor. Superintendent Budd suggests electing a King of the May instead. The committee elects Albert Herring, who accepts the honor with great reluctance. During the May King ceremonies, Sid spikes Albert's lemonade with rum. Later, Albert returns home and overhears Sid and Nancy talking about how sorry they are for him. He suddenly sees himself as others see him — a timid mama's boy. He sets out to discover what he has been missing. The next afternoon, everyone is talking about Albert's disappearance; the town fears the worst. Albert reappears, grubby and disheveled. He has spent his prize money on liquor and remains unrepentant. The committee is horrified, while Sid and Nancy gloat.

From the Director

Benjamin Britten's Albert Herring was the beginning of the end of a long journey of self discovery for the composer. Britten had been a pacifist during World War II and had travelled to America in self-imposed exile to escape what he saw as his war-oriented homeland. Yet, when the war broke out, he felt compelled to return to England and to contribute to the effort in the only way he knew how, to create music. He began to compose operas with distinctly British themes or settings. Over a four-year period he composed four operas that many consider to be his greatest: Peter Grimes, The Rape of Lucretia, Albert Herring, and Billy Budd. All of these operas have one common thread: the individual as outsider, the person in our high school class or on our dorm floor who didn't "fit in," the not-quite adult who doesn't match up to any of society's pre-conceived notions of right or wrong. These operas also deal with the obsession of society to conform these people to meet its criteria and how these outsiders either destruct (as in the case of Peter Grimes) or triumph (as in Albert Herring).

Like Albert Herring, Britten was from a small town on the east coast of England. Unlike Albert, he was raised with a thorough understanding of music and was groomed to be a prodigy. He was cast automatically as the outsider, as anybody who grew up with a desire to be in the arts would know. He was, oddly enough, also an exemplary athlete. As most contemporary composers can tell you, the road to getting works published, let alone performed, is a lonely one, particularly if you are not writing patriotic pieces during a World War. But Britten, with the aid of long-time lover and confidant, Peter Pears, persisted and triumphed. He discovered a unique voice, a voice distinctly British through his music. And though this "artist," this "homosexual," this "small town boy," was raised to be and believed himself to be an "outsider," after years of hardship and self-imposed exile, he emerged triumphant. Albert Herring is the story of the return, the belief in the thought, "you can go home again." It is a loving, sentimental, reflective look at the people in a town looked on much more harshly in Peter Grimes. It is a story with which I hope many of us can identify — a story of escape from the pressures of a repressive society only to return to that same society a stronger, better person making efforts to improve it. It is, in a sense, the story of Britten's life: he did return to Aldeburgh, the area of his youth, and began an arts festival and training colony for young artists which is revered worldwide, but no more than by the residents of that small English town.

About the Artists

Benjamin Britten (Composer) was born in 1913, in Lowestoft, England. In the 1930s, he composed music for more than a dozen movies produced by the G.P.O. Film Unit. This experience introduced him to poet W.H. Auden, and led to collaborations on social and political commentaries like Our Hunting Fathers and Ballad of Heroes. During World War II, Britten declared himself a conscientious objector and moved to the United States with Auden and Peter Pears. Upon returning to England, Britten composed his first great opera, Peter Grimes, which received its premiere at the re-opening of Sadler's Wells Theatre in 1945. Britten's other operas include The Rape of Lucretia, Billy Budd, The Turn of the Screw, and Death in Venice. His compositions for children include Noyes Fludde, Let's Make an Opera, and Saint Nicolas. Britten remained a prolific composer until his death in 1976.

Eric Crozier (Librettist) A writer, librettist, and BBC television producer, Crozier is best-known for his collaborations with Benjamin Britten. In addition to Albert Herring, he wrote the librettos for three other Britten operas: St. Nicolas, Let's Make an Opera, and Billy Budd. He also co-founded the Aldeburgh Festival and the English Opera Group with Britten in the 1940s.

UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN FRIENDS OF Opera

This year marks the seventeenth anniversary of the University of Michigan Friends of Opera, a group dedicated to providing support and encouragement to the opera program at the University of Michigan School of Music. The organization's primary function is to finance annual scholarships for voice majors at Michigan. This year, soprano Julie Wright is the recipient of a $3,500 tuition scholarship.

Since its founding, Friends of Opera has sponsored numerous events, including an annual opera trip and special receptions for opera cast members and friends. The group also provides refreshments during the final week of opera rehearsals and performances for opera cast members. An annual scholarship winner's recital is held at Kerrytown Concert House each fall.

New members are always welcomed. Annual membership (tax deductible) entitles Friends to preferential seating, advance notice about dates and productions, admission to rehearsals, bus trips to opera performances, and invitations to special receptions.

We are proud to be celebrating our fifteenth year in Ann Arbor. SchoolKids' has been rated as one of the top twenty music stores in the country. Here's what folks are saying about us:

"SchoolKids' is a genuine 'record store' in the classic sense; its atmosphere and its regard for the music it sells is clearly unique in the business. It does not underestimate the taste or intelligence of its customers. It carries the widest spectrum of music—all sorts of music—that I've ever seen anywhere. Its employees are helpful, knowledgeable fans of music rather than mere button pushers. Aside from the obvious hits, the store goes out of its way to carry titles that, however obscure, are genuinely GOOD—a trait which fellow customers respect and appreciate. It also has the best selection of deleted records and CDs I've ever seen."
